Adam Palmer is the Chief Cyber Security Counsel for Washington DC based internet brand protection and cyber security company, Cyveillance Incorporated. Adam provides legal counsel to Cyveillance on issues involving Internet governance, anti-phishing, malware detection, Internet financial fraud and internet brand protection. Cyveillance clients include 7 of the top 10 US Banks and a majority of the Fortune 50 companies in the United States.

Prior to joining Cyveillance, Adam served as the Director of the Office of Legal Counsel for The National Center for Missing and Exploited Children (NCMEC). The NCMEC is a private, nonprofit corporation headquartered in Alexandria, VA with branch offices in several other states. Adam regularly advised state and federal law enforcement, and prosecutors, on internet crimes against children cases. The NCMEC Office of Legal Counsel serves as legal counsel for all NCMEC departments and works closely with in-house federal law enforcement on legal issues. Adam has lectured extensively on prosecuting internet crimes against children to all levels of law enforcement.

From 2000-2003, Adam served as a U.S. Navy JAG Prosecutor in Pearl Harbor Hawaii. Adam prosecuted numerous cases as a Navy JAG Attorney including a wide range of crimes against children and a nationally publicized double homicide case. Adam was lead prosecutor in over 50 Courts-Martial and argued dozens of motions in complex cases. While a Navy JAG, Adam also advised and lectured federal law enforcement agents on the investigation of crimes against children. At the end of his service, Adam was awarded the Navy Achievement Medal for outstanding service as a Prosecutor.

Adam earned a J.D. in 2000 and an MBA in 2003. He grew up in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania and is now married and living in the metro Washington D.C. area. Adam is admitted to practice law in Indiana, South Carolina, Washington D.C. and Virginia.
