Mr. Economou joined H5 as Chairman and CEO in March 2000. His professional experience spans over fifteen years in the professional services environment, where he has provided advisory and consulting services to governments and government agencies, corporations, law firms and financial services firms, in areas ranging from information and intelligence monitoring, document review process design and information management in corporate legal services to, earlier in his career, complex cross border, multi-jurisdictional financial structures in project finance transactions. He has served on company boards within the global multinational ABB Asea Brown Boveri and as a Trustee of the Corporate Social Investment Fund, a multi-corporate non-profit organization investing in educational facilities in South Africa's disadvantaged communities. He is currently a member of the Vendor Advisory Panel to the Sedona Conference's Electronic Document Retention and Production Working Group. The published author of a series of articles on international financial theory and practice, Mr. Economou holds a BA from the Graduate Institute of International Studies of the University of Geneva (Switzerland), with a concentration on international public law and political science, an MBA majoring in Finance from the Wharton School of Business, and decided to forgo completion of an executive Master's program at Harvard University's Kennedy School of Government to join H5.
