

Richard A. Primuth

Dick chairs Lindquist & Vennum's business department, which comprises well over 100 attorneys. He has extensive experience in securities law, mergers and acquisitions, complex contract negotiations, and other business law areas.

He serves as lead outside counsel to several public and closely held companies and has frequently served as special counsel to the boards of directors or special board committees for companies that are involved in significant corporate transactions or are facing sensitive corporate governance issues. He is also experienced in a wide variety of other corporate transactions, including venture capital financing, spin-offs, proxy contests, tender offers, joint ventures, and loan negotiations.

Although Dick counsels companies in a variety of industries, he has developed particular knowledge of and experience with the business and legal issues affecting the telecommunications industry.

After graduating from law school, Dick was a law clerk to Judge Thomas E. Fairchild on the U.S. Court of Appeals before joining Lindquist & Vennum in 1973.

He is a member of the Minnesota State Bar Association's Business Law and Communications Law sections and the American Bar Association's Business Section.
