After working in national Democratic politics for four years, Timothy J. Carroll joined Vedder Price's Litigation Practice Area in 1999. He has vast experience in handling a wide variety of commercial litigation matters through trial and arbitration, including those relating to securities fraud, misappropriation of confidential information and trade secrets, and other business tort actions. Mr. Carroll has counseled numerous clients, including a Fortune 25 retailer, an enterprise content management company and a defense contractor, on adopting and implementing records management programs and electronic communications policies. He also regularly consults with corporations and individuals on how to protect corporate assets, including employee relationships, confidential information and trade secrets, and other intellectual property.

Mr. Carroll attended law school at the DePaul University College of Law, where he earned membership to the DePaul Law Review and served as President of the Student Bar Association. He also served a Fellow to the Public Interest Law Initiative in 1999, and is actively involved in pro bono activities. He now serves as a guest lecturer on the law of trade secrets at the DePaul University College of Law's IP Legal Clinic, and has written and presented extensively on the topics of e-Discovery and document retention programs. Mr. Carroll also serves on Vedder Price's Electronic Discovery Task Force and pro bono, technology and summer program committees.

Mr. Carroll is a member of the Executive Advisory Council of Trusted Edge, Inc., a software firm based in Reston, Virginia, is a member of the Legal Advisory Board of Prism Technologies, a provider of data storage solutions headquartered in Oak Brook, Illinois, and is a member of various bar associations.
